COOKIE POLICY

Web version: https://norgru.eu/en/policy/cookie-policy

1. Purpose

This Cookie Policy explains how NÖRGRU may use cookies and similar technologies on norgru.eu and related Services.

Cookies and similar technologies can be used to keep the website operational, remember preferences, provide security, understand usage, and measure performance.

2. What Are Cookies?

A cookie is a small data file stored on a device by a website. First-party cookies are set by the website being visited. Third-party cookies or similar technologies may be set or accessed by external services integrated into the website.

Cookies may be session-based, meaning they normally expire when the browsing session ends, or persistent, meaning they remain for a defined period or until deleted.

3. Categories of Technologies

Client Portal and Authentication Technologies: A Level 3 portal may use session, authentication, security, preference, and access-control technologies necessary to maintain an authorized project session and protect controlled content.

Strictly necessary technologies: required for core website functions, authentication, security, checkout, session management, or other functionality that cannot reasonably be provided without them.

Preference technologies: remember settings such as language, interface preferences, or other choices.

Analytics technologies: help NÖRGRU understand aggregate or pseudonymous usage and improve the website.

Marketing or tracking technologies: where used, may help measure campaigns or provide personalized advertising or tracking. These should be activated only where legally permitted and, where consent is required, after valid consent.

4. Consent

Where applicable law requires consent for storing or accessing information on a user's device, NÖRGRU will request consent before deploying the relevant non-essential technology.

Consent should be freely given, specific, informed, and unambiguous. Refusing non-essential cookies should not require a more difficult process than accepting them, and where consent is used it should be possible to withdraw it.

5. Managing Your Preferences

You can manage or withdraw cookie preferences through the cookie controls made available on the website, where implemented. You can also control or delete cookies through your browser settings, although disabling necessary cookies may affect website functionality.

Browser controls do not necessarily provide the same granular consent choices as a dedicated cookie-consent interface.

6. Third-Party Services

Where implemented, NÖRGRU may use cloud, authentication, security, file-delivery, analytics, and portal infrastructure for Level 3 services. The exact providers and technologies may change and should be reflected in the live technical inventory where required.

NÖRGRU may use third-party services for payment processing, hosting, analytics, security, communications, embedded content, or other functionality. Such services may use their own cookies or similar technologies according to their own policies.

Examples of providers currently or potentially used by NÖRGRU include Payhip, PayPal, Stripe, Cloudflare, analytics providers, and other infrastructure providers. The actual technologies deployed on the website may change over time.

7. Cookie Information and Retention

The exact cookie names, providers, purposes, and lifetimes depend on the technical configuration of the website and third-party services. NÖRGRU should maintain the live cookie-consent inventory separately and keep this Policy aligned with material changes.

Different technologies may persist for different periods. Necessary session technologies may expire when a session ends, while preference, analytics, or other technologies may remain for a defined period.

8. Legal Framework

This Policy is intended to operate alongside applicable data-protection and electronic-communications rules, including the GDPR where applicable and the rules governing access to information stored on a user's device.

Technically necessary cookies generally do not require consent, while non-essential cookies and similar tracking technologies may require consent depending on the applicable legal framework and implementation.

9. Changes

NÖRGRU may update this Cookie Policy as technologies, providers, legal requirements, or website functionality change.
